The Position

Reporting to the Chief Executive Officer, the Chief Human Resources Officer (CHRO) is a key member of the Executive management team, providing a bias for action, and a strong orientation toward business outcomes.

This is an outstanding opportunity for a strategically-minded Human Resources leader with a history of moving the needle in complex business environments via counseling leadership, improving processes and systems, and enhancement of organizational capabilities, such as: building an exceptional HR team, leveraging a culture that attracts, motivates, and retains talent.

The CEO will look to the CHRO as a key business advisor, comprehensive communicator, and executive team facilitator who takes responsibility to assure the senior leadership team is aligned, engaged, and effectively leading the organization. The CHRO will manage all aspects of the Human Resources function, including talent acquisition, talent management, employee relations, compensation, benefits, recruitment, HRIS, organizational development and employee/leadership development across the entire business.

Responsibilities

- Serve as a strategic advisor/partner to the CEO and Senior Management team.
- Develop Centers of Expertise/HR Business Partner/Shared Services model.
- Develop and prioritize human capital metrics that align and support business objectives.
- Create a HR support methodology for business acquisition activity, inclusive of organization design consulting, HR Technology (Workday) support, efficient integrations and application of all AmeriLife HR policies.
- Identify, create and implement Diversity and Inclusion strategy across the organization; design policies that reinforce diversity in the workplace, address harassment and protect minority groups; ensure compliance with state or country regulations on diversity and equity.
- Design and deploy a workforce planning model in conjunction with business input that supports company growth and company performance against objectives.
- Establish specific and simple talent strategies and processes needed to achieve organizational talent objectives (e.g. performance review process, change management, succession/workforce planning, key talent development, etc.)
- In conjunction with business leadership, build scorecards for each role with clear outcomes and measures of success, and define career paths with articulated milestones and metrics, all in support of performance management, development and succession planning.
- Develop a rigorous onboarding program that ensures new employees are ready to be deployed as A-players within 3-6 months of their start dates.
- Consult and advise CEO and C-suite on the optimal culture for AmeriLife, preserving the elements that are working well today and creating a strong employee brand.
- Create a consistent and clear communication cadence for the AmeriLife community.
- Effectively execute core HR functions; such as a Total Rewards strategy including competitive compensation and benefits strategies, HR laws/regulation/fiduciary compliance, payroll and 401k direction, and employee relations.

Qualifications

- At least 15 years of relevant HR leadership experience with significant depth across the various functional disciplines of Human Resources
- At least 3-5 years experience leading the Human Resources function.
- Must have a track record of success in job performance.
- Experience with Private Equity held companies.
- Demonstrated ability to partner with senior level executives to achieve business objectives through the use of HR strategies, operations and tactics.
- Detailed experience implementing state of the art people practices, policies, programs and processes to create value.
- Demonstrated ability to assess, acquire, retain, and develop HR talent needed to support an evolving business

Education

- Bachelor's degree in business, Human Resources or related discipline.
- Advance degree preferred but not required.

The Person

The successful candidate must bring a high level of ethical, intellectual, professional and personal values. Including:

- Demonstrates ability to work collaboratively with the CEO and Senior Leadership Team to achieve company business plan and goals.
- Earns and maintains trust of the CEO. Show prudence and judgment about sharing what is discussed in confidence. Be respectful of the chain of command.
- Communicates in a direct, transparent, and proactive manner, while keeping the CEO informed. Operates with "no surprises."
- Assertive in style, but respectful of others, and skilled in navigating competing organizational priorities and agendas.
- High level of self-awareness and ability to take constructive feedback well and professionally.
- Strong ability to build credible, influencing relationships throughout the organization.
- Strategic thinker who possesses exceptional interpersonal communication skills needed to effectively share and engage the entire organization in the key people initiatives of the company.
- High energy, self-motivated, and hands-on management style when working with all levels of the organization to drive performance and continuous improvement using an analytic and metrics-based approach.
- Derives satisfaction from the work itself rather than praise or recognition.
